

>> Okay. Alright, congratulations again to all of our winners. Those are great stories, and you know, this is a key aspect of what EXIM is all about. Assisting small businesses in new international opportunities. As highlighted over the last couple days, or two days, this conference just shows that the United States needs EXIM. And we're thankful for the many people here who've come to show their support, the many great speakers that consistently made that point over the last two days. Thank you also for our Chairman-to-be Kimberly Reed, Congressman Spencer Bachus, thank you for being here for the entire conference and your support, we look forward again, I can't tell you enough times, you're gonna be here next year and it's gonna be great, so thank you so much being here. Okay, that wraps up the 2019 Conference, we're looking forward to returning next year first week in April. I hope you've enjoyed the conference as much as I did. It was fantastic content, and a lot of new news was made here so we're feeling very excited and I think that the momentum, the tipping point that John Rice mentioned, is something that we're gonna carry forward here, and looking forward to a new day, a new EXIM, and can't wait for next year, for next week, for next month here, we get re-authorized, so thank you very much and we'll see you next year.
